About the course

The seminar provides an overview on regulatory requirements for cosmetic products according to the EU directive 1223/2009, which will be set fully in force by July 2013. As main topic, the basic aspects of Cosmetics GMP according to ISO 22716 will be discussed in detail. This standard – in contrast to former, regional limited rules – presents an international guideline on manufacturing according to cosmetics GMP. By now, it is already effective by regulations of distinct countries and is also referenced in the new EU directive 1223/209 on cosmetic products. Besides the basic content of the ISO 22716 standard, for some specific topics examples of implementation are discussed. A comparison with the known quality management standard ISO 9001 is provided. Answers to questions regarding auditing and certification of the standard will be provided.

A short overview on other standards, guidelines, and customer or regulatory requirements completes the training.

What sets this course apart?

The expert:

Working with a full-service contract manufacturer for cosmetic products, household products and medical devices, Dr. Barth has an enormous expertise and experience. Dealing with GMP even in times before ISO 22716 lead to intensive knowledge on GMP in general (cosmetics, API, drugs). Nowadays Dr. Barth is a member of DIN's (German Institute for Standardization) working group for cosmetics. His practical expertise expands permanently by performing lots of audits in the fields of GMP.

The content:

Besides giving a lecture on the topics of cosmetics GMP according to ISO 22716, the training course will also cover the basic content of the new EU regulation 1223/2009 on cosmetic products. Relevance of ISO 22716 in regulations of several countries of the world is explained, and possibilities for implementation of ISO 22716 into an existing ISO 9001 quality management system are shown. Some additional requirements that are specific for distinct customers are pointed out.
